

The internet has given us access to an uncanny amount of information the likes of which humans have never know. The deceptively name "Restoring Internet Freedom" rule, seeks to limit access to the information by allowing select service providers priority over others. I oppose this effort to monopolize the flow of information.

I believe all ecosystems thrive on diversity. The "Restoring Internet Freedom" rule will stifle the level playing field that allowed for the flourishing of the internet as we know it all in trade for making extremely wealthy companies even wealthier. I believe this to be a short time gain for select shareholders, at the expense of all of humanity.

The internet providers, many of whom started as Cable and Phone service providers, are attempting to apply the same model of not only providing the service but controlling the content. The internet is a platform where we not only consume content but also create it resulting in a diverse web of commerce, entertainment and information. The same model that worked with cable television and phone service does not work with the internet without serverly limiting culture, commerce, and creativity. Please REJECT the "Restoring Internet Freedom" rule. Thank you.
